INSIDER TRADING POLICY

In the normal course of business, officers, directors, employees (including temporary employees) and independent contractors of Alkermes plc and its subsidiaries (the “Company”) may come into possession of material nonpublic information about the Company, its business or its corporate collaborators. In the eyes of the law, this information is considered the property of the Company. If you are in possession of any such information, you may not seek to benefit from it by buying or selling securities yourself or passing on the information to others to enable them to benefit. The purpose of this Insider Trading Policy (this “Policy”) is to inform you of your legal responsibilities in this area, and to make clear that the misuse of material nonpublic information is contrary to Company policy and U.S. securities laws and may lead to severe consequences.

What is Insider Trading?

Insider trading, which entails trading a security with knowledge of material nonpublic information about that security or the issuer of that security, is a crime, penalized by civil fines of reimbursement of amounts unduly received from such trading and punitive payments of up to three times the profit gained or loss avoided by such trading as well as criminal fines up to $5,000,000 (USD) and up to 20 years in jail for individuals. Under some circumstances, individuals convicted of insider trading may be subjected to civil liability in private lawsuits.

In addition to these consequences to the person engaging in insider trading, employers and other controlling persons (including supervisory personnel) are at risk under federal law for the actions of their employees. Controlling persons may, among other things, face major criminal and/or civil penalties if they recklessly fail to take preventive steps to control insider trading. Even if the Company is not prosecuted, the fact that a director, officer, employee or temporary staff of the Company was under investigation or prosecuted for insider trading could severely damage the reputation of the Company.

Thus, it is important both to you and the Company that insider trading violations not occur. You should be aware that stock market surveillance techniques designed to identify potential insider trading transactions have become extremely sophisticated and are being improved all the time. Insider trading cases have been successfully prosecuted against employees based on their trading through foreign accounts, trading by their family members and friends, and trading only involving a small number of shares. The chance that federal authorities or exchange regulators will detect even small-level trading is a significant one.

The Insider Trading Laws

As an officer, director, employee (including temporary employees) or independent contractor of the Company, you may not seek to benefit personally by buying or selling securities while in possession of material, nonpublic information. This rule applies to trading, or directing others to trade for you, in the Company’s securities (whether ordinary shares, preferred shares, convertible securities, stock options or any other derivative securities that provide the economic equivalent of ownership of any of the Company’s securities or an opportunity, direct or indirect, to benefit from any change in the value of the Company’s securities) and in the securities of other companies if you learn something in the course of your employment or relationship with the Company that might affect the value of any such other company.

For instance, if you learned that we were about to acquire ABC Corporation prior to a public announcement, it would almost certainly be an insider trading violation for you to buy or sell ABC securities as well as the Company’s securities. If you learned something about XYZ Corporation which was not publicly known while you were working for us on a collaboration with XYZ, buying or selling XYZ securities might well be considered illegal, even if the information learned was not related to the collaboration. The insider trading rules apply both to purchases of securities (to make a profit based on good news) and sales of securities (to avoid a loss based on bad news). Sometimes material nonpublic information about the Company or another company with which we are working comes to your attention even though you are not directly involved in the project. You are nonetheless prohibited from buying or selling the Company’s securities or the securities of such other company.

What is “Material” Information?

"Material" information is information that a typical investor would likely consider significant. There is no fixed quantitative threshold amount for determining materiality; even very small quantitative changes can be qualitatively material if they would result in a movement in the price of the Company’s ordinary shares. Chances are, if you learn something that leads you to want to buy or sell securities, that information will be considered material. Both positive and negative information may be material. It is important to keep in mind that material information need not be definitive information; information that something is likely to happen, or even just that it may happen, can be considered material. Examples of information that could be potentially material include changes in Company management, threatened litigation, Company or product performance above or below issued financial guidance, our involvement in merger or licensing negotiations, even though the deal had not yet been agreed to and may never be agreed to, or the success of a feasibility or clinical study for a development compound. Keep in mind that the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”) takes the view that the mere fact that you know the material information is enough to bar you from trading. Therefore, trading while in possession of material, nonpublic information or tipping this information to others to trade, even if such trades were not based on such information, is violative of this Policy and the law. You should seek guidance from the Chief Financial Officer or the Chief Legal Officer to determine whether the information in your possession is “material.”

What is “Nonpublic” Information?

"Nonpublic" information is any information that is not reasonably accessible to the investing public. To show that information is public, it is necessary to point to some fact that establishes that the information has become publicly available, such as the filing of a report with the SEC, the distribution of a press release through a widely disseminated news or wire service, or by other means that are reasonably designed to provide broad public access. Before a person who possesses material, nonpublic information can trade, there must also be adequate time for the market as a whole to absorb the information that has been disclosed. Once the Company releases information through public channels (for instance, in a press release or an SEC filing), it may take up to 48 hours for it to be considered broadly disseminated.

Policy

Prohibited Use of Material, Nonpublic Information

When you are in possession of material, nonpublic information about the Company, or about any other company if such information is gained in the course of your employment or other relationship with us, or you are in a “blackout period” (as described below), you are prohibited from engaging in any activity that would be considered unlawful trading or tipping under the U.S. securities laws, whether in the Company’s securities or the securities of another company. These prohibitions extend to your family members living in the same home as you and to any investment fund, trust, retirement plan, partnership, corporation or other entity over which you have the ability to influence or direct investment decisions concerning securities, and continues whenever and for as long as you know or are in possession of material, nonpublic information or the blackout period is in place. You are responsible for ensuring compliance with this Policy by all such persons affiliated with you. The SEC and federal prosecutors may presume that trading by your family members, including those that do not live in the same home as you, and friends is based on information you supplied and may treat any such transactions as if you had traded yourself. There is no exception for small transactions or transactions that may seem necessary or justifiable for personal financial emergency or hardship.

Tipping Information to Others

Besides your obligation to refrain from trading or having others trade on your behalf while you are in possession of material, nonpublic information, you are also prohibited from “tipping” others. The concept of unlawful tipping includes passing on material, nonpublic information to friends, family members or others.
under circumstances that suggest that you were trying to help them make a profit or avoid a loss. When tipping occurs, both the "tipper" and the "tippee" may be held liable, and this liability may extend to all those to whom the tippee gives information. Besides being considered a form of insider trading, tipping is also a serious breach of corporate confidentiality. You should be careful to avoid discussing confidential information in any place (for instance, at lunch, on public transportation, on a cell phone in a public place, in elevators, etc.) where such information may be overheard or intercepted by others. You should exercise care when discussing any material nonpublic information with other members of our work force who do not have a “need to know” such information, even if they are subject to this Policy, so as to reduce the possibility of leaks.

Buying and Selling Company Securities

If you want to buy or sell any of the Company’s securities, you must first determine if you are in possession of material, nonpublic information. If so, you may not buy or sell or otherwise trade in, or provide such information to others to trade in, any of the Company’s securities, no matter what position you hold with the Company. This includes the exercise of stock options using cash from the sale of shares to pay the exercise price (also known as a “cashless exercise”). If you are not sure whether or not you are in possession of material, nonpublic information, you should err on the side of caution and not buy, sell or trade, or tip others to trade, any of the Company’s securities.

From time to time, the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer may determine that certain persons within the Company or everyone within the Company may not buy or sell the Company’s securities, also known as a “blackout period.” You will be notified when a blackout period is in place.

Please note that the fact that the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer has determined that no purchases or sales may be made would itself be material nonpublic information that should not be discussed outside the Company.

Since financial information about the Company can significantly affect trading in the Company’s securities, all officers, directors, employees (including temporary employees) and independent contractors are subject to a blackout period beginning at the end of the 15th day of the final month of each fiscal quarter, and ending 48 hours after the public release of quarterly or annual financial results. You may not buy or sell any of the Company’s securities or enter into a planned sales program for the Company’s securities during any such period.

At other times, the Company may issue other material information to the public. You may not buy or sell in the 48-hour period after the initial release to the public of material information regarding the Company. The Company typically releases that information to the public through press releases and filings with the SEC (for example, reports on Forms 10-Q, 10-K and 8-K). A company-wide e-mail will inform you of each press release or SEC filing which would impose a 48-hour period during which no purchases, sales or trades may be made.

Please note that stock options issued by the Company have an expiration date. It is your responsibility to track the expiration date of any stock options which you may have been granted and to plan accordingly if you wish to exercise such options via a cashless exercise.

Buying or Selling Securities of Other Companies

As previously discussed in this Policy, if you want to buy or sell any securities (including ordinary shares, preferred shares, convertible securities, or warrants) of a company that is a corporate partner, a collaborator, a possible acquisition target or any other company about which you’ve received information in the course of your employment with us, you must first determine whether you are in possession of any nonpublic information and whether that information is material to that company. If you are not sure whether you are in possession of material nonpublic information, you should err on the side of caution and not buy, sell or otherwise trade, or tip others to trade, such securities.
Post-Termination Transactions

This Policy continues to apply even after termination of your employment or other service with the Company. If an individual is in possession of material nonpublic information when his or her service terminates, that individual may not trade in the securities of the company to which such information relates until that information has become public or is no longer material.

Additional Prohibited Transactions

Officers, directors, employees (including temporary employees) and independent contractors are prohibited from engaging in speculative transactions in the Company’s securities, including by way of the purchase or sale of “put” or “call” options or other derivative securities directly linked to our equity; short sales of our equity; the use of our equity as a pledge or as collateral in a margin account; and trading in straddles, equity swaps, or other hedging transactions directly linked to our equity, even if such persons do not possess material, nonpublic information.

Preclearance

To provide assistance in preventing inadvertent insider trading violations and avoiding the appearance of an improper transaction (which could result, for example, when an employee engages in a trade while unaware of a pending major Company development) and for purposes of compliance with the reporting requirements relating to insider transactions, the Company has implemented the following preclearance policy:

- Members of the Alkermes plc board of directors, management committee and disclosure committee, “officers” of the Company (as such term is defined in Section 16a-1(f) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the “Exchange Act”), and each such officer, a “Section 16 Reporting Officer”), Company employees in a position of vice president (or equivalent) or higher, Company employees in the finance, business development, alliance management, business planning, corporate affairs, investor relations, legal, and certain employees designated by management in the research and development, commercial and information technology organizations, must obtain preclearance from the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer before they may buy or sell any of the Company’s securities, even if no blackout period is in effect such that the “window” for trading in the Company’s securities is then open and transactions in the Company’s securities would otherwise be allowed under this Policy.

- Additionally, from time to time, certain additional individuals may be exposed to material nonpublic information because of their job or other relationship with the Company and shall be required to seek preclearance from the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer before buying or selling any of the Company’s securities.

- A list of individuals requiring pre-clearance by the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer will be periodically generated by the legal department of the Company and communicated to the employees on the list (“Preclearance List”).

Be advised that preclearance from the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer does not constitute legal advice, does not constitute confirmation that you do not possess material nonpublic information and does not relieve you of your obligations under the U.S. securities laws; it is a safeguard that the Company has put in place to help protect you and the Company.

If you are an individual who requires preclearance and you are contemplating a transaction in the Company’s securities, you should contact the legal department at least two business days in advance. You can send your preclearance request to preclearancerequest@alkermes.com. You are responsible for ensuring that you do not have material nonpublic information about the Company, or about other companies if you learn something in the course of your employment or relationship with the Company that might affect the value of any such other company, before engaging in a transaction involving such company’s securities and that you comply with any and all other legal obligations. Therefore, when a request for preclearance is made, you should carefully consider whether you are aware of any material nonpublic information and should describe fully those circumstances to the Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer. The Chief Financial Officer or Chief Legal Officer is under no obligation to approve a trade submitted for preclearance.

If you are cleared to trade, the transaction must be executed within 48 hours after receiving preclearance approval but, even if so approved, may not be executed if you acquire material, nonpublic information after preclearance approval and before executing the trade. If the transaction does not take place during that time, you must re-request preclearance through the same process.

Special Types of Permitted Transactions

Cash Exercises of Stock Options

This Policy does not apply to an exercise of an employee stock option when payment of the exercise price is made in cash. This Policy does apply, however, to the use of outstanding Company securities to constitute part, or all, of the exercise price of a stock option, any sale of shares as part of a broker-assisted cashless exercise of a stock option, or any other market sale for the purpose of generating the cash needed to pay the exercise price of a stock option. No matter how you acquire the Company’s securities, during your employment with the Company, you may only sell the Company’s securities, including those obtained through a stock option exercise, at the time(s) outlined in this Policy.

Planned Sales Programs

Under SEC Rule 10b5-1, sales of the Company’s securities may be permitted when planned for in advance so that possession of material nonpublic information at the time of the sale is irrelevant. If you are a member of the Alkermes plc board of directors, management committee or disclosure committee or a Section 16 Reporting Officer, the Company strongly encourages you to buy or sell the Company’s securities under a planned sales program under Rule 10b5-1. Planned selling programs may only be established during an open trading window (a period during which you would be able to trade under this Policy). Members of the Alkermes plc board of directors and Section 16 Reporting Officers should also be mindful of their respective share ownership and holding requirements under the Alkermes plc Amended and Restated Share Ownership and Holding Guidelines when considering establishing a planned sales program or any other transaction in the Company’s securities.

In addition, if you routinely have access to material nonpublic information as part of your responsibilities with the Company, you may find a planned sales program to be useful as well.

All planned sales programs must be approved prior to their execution by the Chief Financial Officer or the Chief Legal Officer and must include a 30-day waiting period between the date of execution of the planned sales program and the date of the first planned sale or other transaction under the planned sales program. A modification must occur during an open trading window.

Transactions effected pursuant to a pre-approved Rule 10b5-1 plan will not be subject to the Company’s blackout periods or pre-clearance procedures.

Gifts

Bona fide gifts of the Company’s securities are allowed even during blackout periods. You should be aware, however, that gifts may not be used to circumvent the insider trading laws. For instance, giving a gift of the Company’s securities to a family member who then in turn sells the Company’s securities is not allowed when you yourself are not allowed to sell that security under the insider trading laws. Members of the Alkermes plc board of directors, management committee or disclosure committee and Section 16 Reporting Officers should preclear gifts of the Company’s securities with the Chief Financial Officer or the Chief Legal Officer.
Investing in Mutual Funds

You may invest in any mutual fund which invests in the Company’s securities or the securities of any company with which we have a relationship without regard to this Policy.

Reports of purchases and sales

If you are a member of the Alkermes plc board of directors or a Section 16 Reporting Officer, keep in mind the various restrictions on securities trading imposed under Section 16 of the Exchange Act and the corresponding reporting requirements. You must immediately report to the Chief Financial Officer or the Chief Legal Officer all transactions made in the Company’s securities by you, any family member, and any entities that you control. We require same-day reporting to the Company of any such transaction due to SEC requirements that certain insider reports be filed with the SEC by the second day after the date on which a reportable transaction occurs.

Disclosure of Confidential Information

The confidentiality of all material nonpublic information that you learn while working at the Company (whether or not such information is about the Company) must be strictly maintained within the Company. Only certain executive officers and certain members of the Corporate Affairs and Investor Relations departments are authorized to disclose material nonpublic information about the Company to the public, members of the investment community (including analysts), or to shareholders, unless one of these executive officers expressly authorizes disclosure by another employee in advance.

In addition, with advances in electronic communications and the corresponding increased use of the Internet, email communications, social networking sites, video sharing websites, electronic bulletin boards, chat rooms and blogs, electronic discussions about companies and their business prospects (collectively, “Electronic and Social Media”) have become common. Inappropriate communications disseminated on the Internet may pose an inherently greater risk due to the size of the audience they can reach. It is important for Company employees who choose to participate in social media to understand what is recommended, expected and required when discussing Company-related topics. In this context, you are prohibited from sharing any nonpublic information about the Company and from discussing revenues, future plans, prospects, products or the share price of the Company in any comments, responses, or postings on any Electronic and Social Media.

You should not, under any circumstances, recommend or express opinions as to the Company’s securities or comment on rumors or predictions about the Company, regardless of whether the rumor is false and whether you think your recommendation, opinion or comment is being made on an anonymous basis (for example, in any Electronic or Social media platform). If you are ever asked a direct question about the Company or any prevailing rumor about the Company, you should respond that it is Company policy not to comment on such matters and that any questions should be directed to the Company’s Investor Relations department or Chief Financial Officer.

This Policy operates in addition to any other Company policies relating to safeguarding the confidentiality of the Company’s internal, proprietary information.

Reporting of Violations

If you violate this Policy or any federal or state laws governing insider trading, or know of any such violation by any director, officer, employee, or independent contractor of the Company, you must report the violation immediately to your supervisor, or the Chief Financial Officer or the Chief Legal Officer of the Company.

Persons violating this Policy will be subject to disciplinary action by the Company, up to and including termination.
Modifications

The Company may at any time change this Policy or adopt such other policies or procedures which it considers appropriate to carry out the purposes of this Policy. Notice of any such change will be delivered to you by the Company by regular or electronic mail or other delivery option used by the Company.

Questions

You are encouraged to ask questions and seek any follow-up information that you may require with respect to the matters set forth in this Policy. Please direct all questions to the Company’s Chief Financial Officer and/or Chief Legal Officer.
